"imt portugal" is what people abroad type first.

When we mapped Google's autocomplete for our six editions in October, the Portuguese transfer tax came first in French from Luxembourg, France and Switzerland, in Portuguese from Brazil and in English from the US. Before neighborhoods, before visas.

Here's what the IMT Code says for one €250,000 home, checked on October 24, 2026:

Resident, own permanent home: €7,042 (2026 progressive table).
Resident, other home: €8,105.
Non-resident: €18,750. Article 17(10), added by Decree-Law 97/2026, sets a flat 7.5% for non-residents buying an urban property used exclusively for housing, with no exemption or reduction, unless an exception applies.

The exceptions: your client has been considered a Portuguese tax resident, becomes one within two years, or lets the home within the decree's rent caps. How the first one reads for people who emigrated is still an open question for lawyers.

Stamp duty is 0.8% for everyone. Same apartment, an €11,708 IMT gap.

Un bien à 400 000 € au Portugal, payé depuis Genève : 400 060 CHF tout compris.

Pour un non-résident fiscal au Portugal, le compte est simple à poser. L'article 17, n.º 10 du Code de l'IMT, ajouté par le décret-loi 97/2026, fixe un taux unique de 7,5 % pour l'achat d'un immeuble urbain destiné exclusivement à l'habitation, sans exonération ni réduction, sauf exception.

Sur 400 000 € : 30 000 € d'IMT, 3 200 € de droit de timbre (0,8 %) et 375 € pour l'acte et l'enregistrement à la Casa Pronta. Total 433 575 €, soit environ 400 060 CHF au taux de référence BCE du 23 octobre 2026.

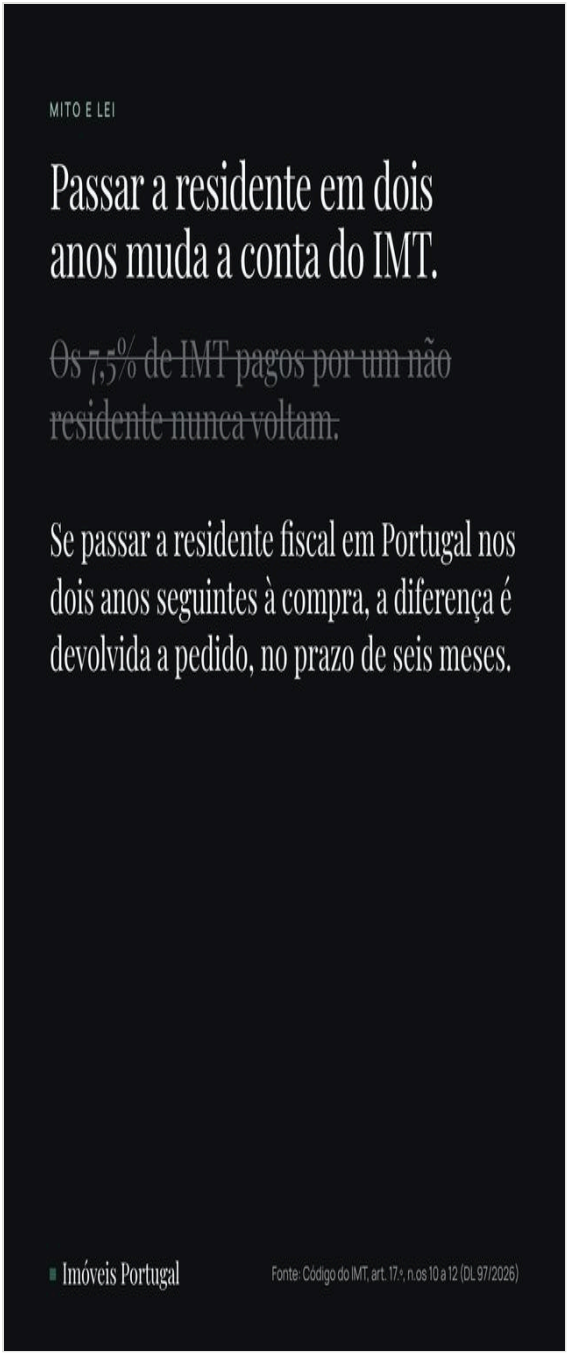

Deux règles comptent aussi pour un client résident en Suisse :
le 2e pilier ne se retire que pour la résidence principale, en Suisse ou à l'étranger, jamais pour une résidence secondaire, avec un minimum de 20 000 CHF ;
hors UE et EEE, être propriétaire au Portugal impose un représentant fiscal ou l'adhésion aux notifications électroniques.

Les honoraires d'avocat ne sont pas inclus : ils se fixent avec l'avocat.

Two years. That's the window that changes the Portuguese transfer tax for Americans planning a move.

"Moving to portugal from usa" is one of the top searches we mapped for the US. A client who buys before becoming tax resident is a non-resident under the IMT Code: a flat 7.5% for an urban property used exclusively for housing, with no exemption or reduction, unless an exception applies (article 17(10), added by Decree-Law 97/2026).

One exception fits the mover. If your client becomes a Portuguese tax resident within two years of the purchase, the difference is refunded on request, within six months. The full 7.5% is paid first, on the day of assessment or within 30 days.

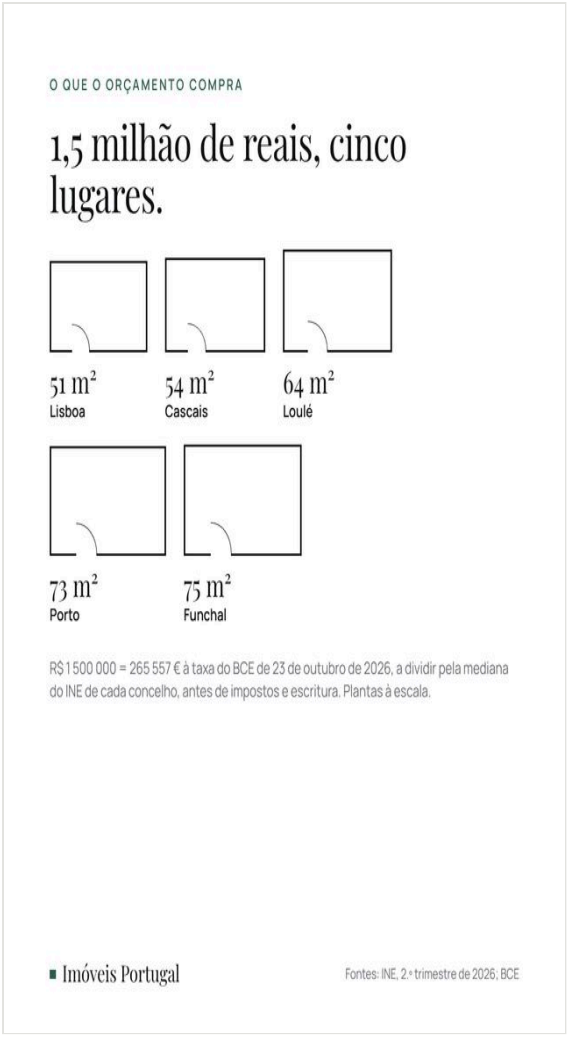

On a €300,000 home (about $335,800 at the ECB rate of October 23, 2026), that's €22,500 paid at purchase, against €10,542 for a resident's own permanent home.

Two US-side details clients ask about: a Portuguese account used for the purchase counts toward the $10,000 FBAR threshold, and owning outside the EU means appointing a tax representative or joining Portugal's electronic notifications.

Avec un crédit, la facture d'un achat au Portugal compte deux lignes de plus.

Pour les banques et les promoteurs qui accompagnent des clients non résidents, voici le calcul sur un bien à 250 000 €, avec les chiffres officiels vérifiés en octobre 2026.

Sans crédit : 18 750 € d'IMT au taux unique de 7,5 % prévu pour les non-résidents (Code de l'IMT, art. 17, n.º 10, ajouté par le décret-loi 97/2026 : immeuble urbain destiné exclusivement à l'habitation, sans exonération ni réduction, sauf exception), 2 000 € de droit de timbre et 375 € à la Casa Pronta. Total : 271 125 €.

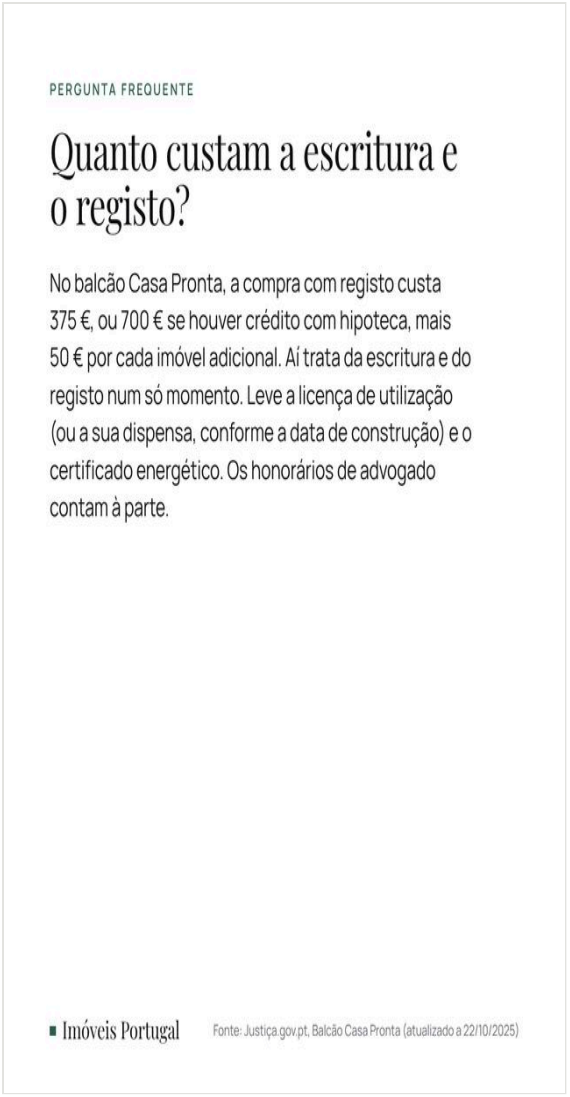

Avec un crédit : hors résidence principale, la Banco de Portugal plafonne le prêt à 80 % de la valeur. Sur 200 000 € empruntés, 0,6 % de droit de timbre, soit 1 200 €, et la Casa Pronta passe à 700 € car l'hypothèque est enregistrée aussi. Total : 272 650 €.

S'y ajoute ensuite 4 % de droit de timbre sur chaque paiement d'intérêts, pendant toute la durée du prêt.

One square meter in the canton of Geneva buys 2.3 in Lisbon.

For journalists and advisers writing about cross-border buyers, here are three official price series side by side, each with its method.

Canton of Geneva: CHF 10,853 per m², median, existing condominium apartments, 2024 (OCSTAT). That's €11,762 at the ECB rate of October 23, 2026, or 2.3 m² in Lisbon.
Luxembourg City: €10,269 per m², mean, existing apartments, July 2025 to June 2026 (Observatoire de l'Habitat). 2.0 m² in Lisbon.
Paris: €9,692 per m², median, existing apartments, October 2025 to September 2026 (Notaires de France). 1.9 m² in Lisbon.

Lisbon itself: €5,192 per m², INE median for all homes sold in the 12 months to Q2 2026.

The methods differ (mean against median, canton against city, apartments against all homes), so these are orders of magnitude, not like-for-like indices. And the purchase taxes come next: a non-resident pays the flat 7.5% IMT of article 17(10) of the IMT Code, unless an exception applies.

Thread: to find: a thread asking what the closing costs are when buying a home in Portugal as a non-resident (IMT, stamp duty, notary)

Short version for a €250,000 home if you aren't a Portuguese tax resident: €271,125 all in, before the lawyer's fee. Here's how it breaks down and where each number comes from.

1. IMT, the transfer tax, paid once. Article 17(10) of the IMT Code, added by Decree-Law 97/2026, says non-residents buying an urban property used exclusively for housing pay a flat 7.5%, with no exemption or reduction, unless an exception applies. On €250,000 that's €18,750.

The exceptions (article 17(10) to (12)): you have been considered a Portuguese tax resident; you become one within two years of the purchase; or you let the home for housing within six months, at a rent within the decree's caps, for at least 36 months in the first five years. In the last two cases you pay the 7.5% first and the difference is refunded on request within six months. How the first exception applies to people who lived in Portugal before emigrating isn't settled yet, so that one is a question for a lawyer before you sign the promissory contract.

For comparison, a resident buying their own permanent home pays €7,042 on the same price under the 2026 progressive table, and €8,105 for another home.

IMT is paid on the day it's assessed or within the following 30 days.

2. Stamp duty on the purchase: 0.8% for everyone, so €2,000.

3. Deed and registration: at a Casa Pronta office both are done in one sitting for €375 with one registration act, or €700 with more than one, for example when a mortgage is registered too. Plus €50 per extra property.

4. Lawyer: the fee is agreed directly with the lawyer, so there's no official number to quote.

With a mortgage, two more lines: 0.6% stamp duty on the amount borrowed (loans of five years or more) and 4% stamp duty on the interest, paid with each instalment. Banco de Portugal caps the loan at 80% of the value for anything that isn't your own permanent home (90% if it is).

Totals at €250,000: 250,000 + 18,750 + 2,000 + 375 = €271,125 in cash. With an 80% loan (€200,000): €1,200 stamp duty on the loan and €700 at Casa Pronta instead of €375, so €272,650.

All rates checked against the official texts in late October 2026.

Thread: How much is IMT in Portugal for non-residents? (to find: match the existing question wording before posting)
Rules: not verified: reddit.com and quora.com are blocked from the build environment; the person posting reads the community rules first

If you aren't a Portuguese tax resident, IMT on a home is a flat 7.5% of the price. That's article 17(10) of the IMT Code, added by Decree-Law 97/2026: non-resident buyers of an urban property used exclusively for housing pay a flat rate, with no exemption or reduction, unless an exception applies.

What it means in euros. Residents pay IMT on a progressive table that depends on how they'll use the home; non-residents pay the flat rate whatever the price. With the 2026 tables:

- €250,000: €7,042 for a resident's own permanent home, €8,105 for a resident's other home, €18,750 for a non-resident.
- €300,000: €10,542, €11,605 and €22,500.
- €400,000: €18,237, €19,300 and €30,000.

The resident figures follow the splitting rule in article 17(3): the price is cut at the top of the bracket below it, the lower part pays that bracket's average rate and the rest pays the marginal rate. At €300,000 for your own home, €198,347 pays 1.7274% and the remaining €101,653 pays 7%.

The three exceptions (article 17(10) to (12)):

1. You have been considered a Portuguese tax resident.
2. You become a Portuguese tax resident within two years of the purchase.
3. You let the home for housing within six months, at a rent within the decree's caps, for at least 36 months in the first five years.

In cases 2 and 3 you pay the full 7.5% at purchase and the difference is refunded on request within six months. Case 1 is the one people who once lived in Portugal ask about; how it applies to past residence is still being read, so it's a question for a Portuguese lawyer or tax adviser with your own dates in hand.

When it's paid. On the day of assessment or within the following 30 days.

What IMT isn't. It's only one line of the bill. Stamp duty of 0.8% applies to everyone, and the deed with registration at a Casa Pronta office costs €375 (€700 with a mortgage). A €250,000 home therefore costs a non-resident €271,125 before the lawyer's fee.
