Document: document-en.pdf (slide-01-en.png to slide-09-en.png), 1080×1350.

Portugal's median square metre: €2,264. Up 17.7% in a year.

That's INE's figure for homes sold in the 12 months to June 2026, released on October 23. A year earlier it was €1,923.

We read it as space, because that's how people abroad ask the question. At the median, €300,000 buys more than 100 m² in 281 of the 304 municipalities with an INE figure. In Lisbon, about 58 m². In Porto, 83. In Grândola, Comporta's municipality, 118.

The document puts it on nine pages: the national line since 2016 (+173%), what €500,000 buys in six places, what a non-resident pays to close, and the gross yield INE's rent data gives (5.2% nationally, before costs and tax).

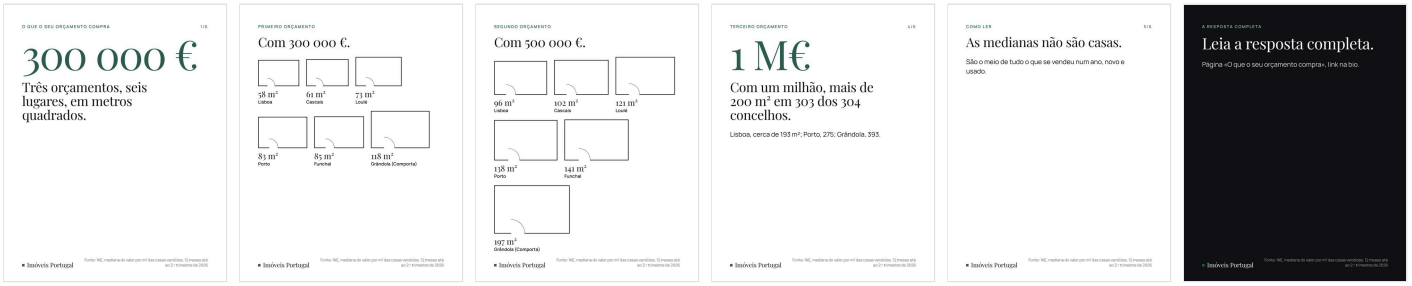

Medians aren't homes. They're the middle of everything sold in a year, new and existing, and they don't describe prime areas inside a municipality. They show where a budget goes further.

From December 1, the same figures sit on one map, for readers in Luxembourg, France, Switzerland, Brazil, the US and Israel.

+17.7% in a year. That's the change in Portugal's median price per m² of homes sold, INE's figure for the 12 months to June 2026: €2,264, against €1,923 a year earlier.

In space: at the national median, €300,000 bought 156 m² a year earlier. Today it buys 133.

The rise is broad. Lisbon's median went from €4,525 to €5,192 per m² (+14.7%), Porto's from €3,060 to €3,631 (+18.7%).

Over ten years the national line runs from €830 in early 2016 to €2,264, up 173%.

People abroad search this in plain words: "portugal house prices", "prix immobilier portugal", "preço casas portugal". What they want to know is what their budget buys now. From December 1, our map answers it for every municipality, with INE's ten-year line, the median rent and the gross yield.

If you work with clients buying in Portugal from abroad, the house-prices page shows any municipality's series. Link in the first comment.

$500,000 in Portugal, five places.

At the ECB rate of October 23 ($1.1193 to the euro), $500,000 is €446,708. Divided by INE's median price per m² of homes sold in the year to June 2026, it buys 86 m² in Lisbon, 91 in Cascais, 108 in Loulé in the Algarve, 123 in Porto and 176 in Grândola, Comporta's municipality.

US clients meet two sets of rules before they meet a floor plan.

On the Portuguese side, a non-resident pays IMT at a flat 7.5% on a home, unless an exception applies, such as becoming a Portuguese tax resident within two years.

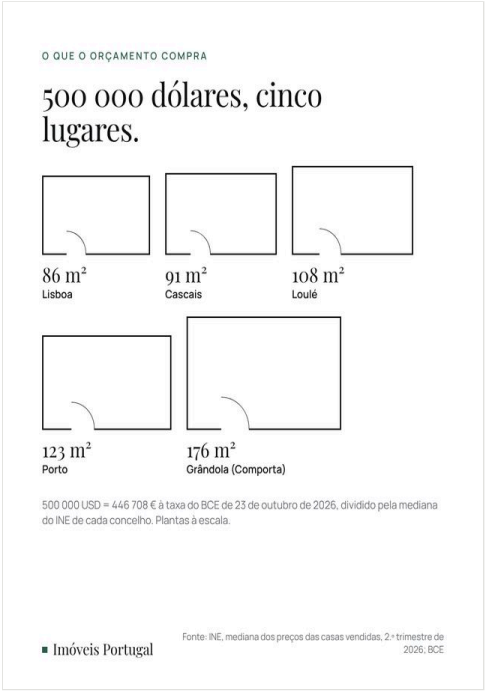

On the US side, money waiting in a Portuguese bank account counts toward the $10,000 FBAR threshold. If they later live in Portugal, the Form 8938 thresholds for taxpayers abroad are $200,000 at year end or $300,000 at any time ($400,000 and $600,000 for joint filers).

We describe the rules and the numbers; advice on a client's case stays with their lawyer and tax adviser. The map, in dollars, is in the first comment.

First comment: La carte, ouverte au prix d'un mètre carré genevois : https://imoveisportugal.ch/fr/ch/carte/?budget=11762&utm_source=linkedin&utm_medium=social&utm_campaign=w04-geneve

Un mètre carré à Genève. Plus de deux à Lisbonne.

Le prix médian des appartements en PPE vendus sur le marché libre dans le canton de Genève était de 10 853 CHF le m² en 2024 (OCSTAT). Au taux BCE du 23 octobre 2026, cela fait environ 11 762 €.

Au prix médian de l'INE, ce même mètre carré genevois correspond à 2,3 m² à Lisbonne, 2,4 m² à Cascais, 3,2 m² à Porto et 3,3 m² à Funchal.

Pour les clients établis en Suisse, une question revient vite : le 2e pilier. Le retrait anticipé de la prévoyance professionnelle est possible pour la résidence principale, en Suisse ou à l'étranger, à partir de 20 000 CHF. Pas pour une résidence secondaire.

Nous décrivons les règles et les chiffres. Le conseil sur un dossier reste chez le conseiller du client.

La carte est en premier commentaire.

Short version: the official median for homes sold in Portugal in the 12 months to June 2026 is €2,264 per m². That's INE, the national statistics office (indicator 0012234, released 23 October 2026). A year earlier it was €1,923, so +17.7%.

The national figure hides a wide spread by municipality. Same indicator, same period:

- Lisbon: €5,192/m²
- Cascais: €4,889
- Loulé (Algarve, the municipality that includes Quinta do Lago and Vilamoura): €4,137
- Porto: €3,631
- Funchal (Madeira): €3,538
- Grândola (the municipality Comporta is in): €2,543

Turned into space, €300,000 buys about 58 m² in Lisbon, 83 m² in Porto and 118 m² in Grândola at the median. Across the country it's more than 100 m² in 281 of the 304 municipalities INE publishes a figure for.

A few things worth knowing about these numbers:

1. They're medians of actual sales, new and existing homes together, not asking prices from listing sites.
2. Each figure covers the last 12 months, so it moves slowly and trails the most recent deals.
3. Inside one municipality the spread is wide. A beach area or a historic centre can sit well above the municipal median, and the median says nothing about a specific flat.

For context over ten years: Lisbon was €1,875/m² in Q1 2016 and Porto €1,088. That's +177% and +234%.

If you're not a Portuguese tax resident, the purchase taxes are part of the number too. IMT on a home bought by a non-resident is a flat 7.5% unless an exception applies (one of them: becoming a Portuguese tax resident within two years, with the difference refunded on request). Then 0.8% stamp duty, and €375 for the deed and registration if you use the state's Casa Pronta desk. Lawyer fees are separate. On a €500,000 home that comes to €541,875.

How the IMT exceptions apply to your own case is a question for a Portuguese lawyer or tax adviser, not for a forum.

Yes, per square metre, by a factor of roughly two to five depending on where you compare. The official numbers let you put them side by side, with some care.

Portugal (INE, median value per m² of family dwellings sold in the 12 months to the 2nd quarter of 2026):

- whole country: €2,264
- Lisbon €5,192, Cascais €4,889, Loulé in the Algarve €4,137, Porto €3,631, Funchal in Madeira €3,538, Grândola (Comporta's municipality) €2,543

The three places people usually compare it with:

- Luxembourg City: €10,269 per m², the average registered price of existing apartments from July 2025 to June 2026 (Observatoire de l'Habitat). It's a mean, not a median.
- Paris: €9,692 per m², the median for existing apartments from October 2025 to September 2026 (Notaires de France).
- Geneva: CHF 10,853 per m², the median for existing condominium (PPE) apartments sold on the free market in the canton in 2024 (OCSTAT). That's about €11,762 at the ECB reference rate of 23 October 2026 (0.9227 francs to the euro).

So the price of one square metre in Luxembourg City pays for about 2.0 m² in Lisbon and 2.8 m² in Porto. One in Paris pays for 1.9 and 2.7. One in Geneva for 2.3 and 3.2. Against Portugal's national median, the ratio runs from 4.3 (Paris) to 5.2 (Geneva).

Caveats that matter:

1. The sources aren't identical: mean against median, a city against a canton, different 12-month windows, apartments only abroad against all family dwellings in Portugal. Read the ratios as orders of magnitude, not exact figures.
2. Portuguese medians are sale values, new and existing homes together. Prime areas inside a municipality sit well above its median.
3. Prices in Portugal have moved fast: the national median rose 17.7% in the year to mid-2026, and 173% since early 2016 (€830 per m² then).
4. Purchase taxes differ. A non-resident pays IMT at a flat 7.5% on a home in Portugal unless an exception applies (becoming a Portuguese tax resident within two years is one), plus 0.8% stamp duty. Whether an exception covers someone who lived in Portugal years ago is a question for a Portuguese lawyer or tax adviser.
